

We're creating something positive for the future by keeping UNIQLO items in circulation, maximising all the possibilities our clothes have to offer.

Repair your favourite clothes so you can keep wearing and loving them. Remake them into fresh new items. Donate clothes you no longer wear for people in the community who need them.

Well-worn clothes are recycled and turned into materials for new clothing and energy sources.

At RE.UNIQLO STUDIO we're pursuing a new future for clothes.

Enjoy your LifeWear fully, freely and for longer.

REUSE

We collect secondhand clothes in stores and deliver them to people in need around the world. Alongside the United Nations Refugee Agency (UNHCR), NGOs and non-profit organisations, we help to provide emergency clothing aid for refugee camps and disaster areas.

RECYCLE

Clothing that cannot be reused is recycled into new fibers and energy sources. Recently, we have been actively recycling garments into brand new clothing, starting with our down products.

Studio Masachuka

Established in London in 2012 by Japanese garment maker and sewing expert Masahiko Morikawa, Studio Masachuka specialises in the traditional Japanese mending technique known as Sashiko, which dates back to the Edo period (1615–1868). Sashiko was first developed among workers such as farmers and fishermen who used embroidery and stitching to mend worn-out clothing. Back then, cloth was a precious commodity and by applying Sashiko it could be made stronger and last longer. These mended clothes were passed down through generations. In fact, you could say that Sashiko is one of the oldest forms of upcycling.
